Properties in Elements are much simpler than in Photoshop. In Elements you can select a colour, do a 'rule of thirds' split or change contrast and white balance. You can apply quick filters and make selections. This is done with the Magic Wand or Mask, and you can select parts of an image. The advanced Filter menu has all the extra tools and features of Photoshop. The most useful is the Auto Contrast filter, which updates the contrast based on the brightness of the image. This helps you avoid over-contrasting your images. The useful Type Filters apply basic effects to text, like turning it into a photo and enlarging it. Make a Panorama image of a scene with the Panorama tool, or a Horizontal and Vertical Curves adjustments to brighten shadows and darken highlights, and an Anti-aliasing filter to remove high-frequency imperfections. Masks can be used to hide parts of an image. You can create a selection by doing a quick fill with it's edge, and you can save the selection as an alpha channel to apply it to another image. You can save a drawing as a vector file and cut and paste shapes to re-use them in other documents. Elements also contains a feature similar to Photoshop's Layers (from PhotoShop) – you can duplicate them, move them, and arrange them on the canvas. Layer styles like reflections, glows, gradient fills, patterns, transparency, shadows and highlights can be applied, and they can be adjusted in any layer style adjustment tool. To change the overall colour of an image you can use Curves – you can change brightness, contrast and saturation. The adjustment tool offers many different curves. You can apply filters such as the ones in Photoshop's Filter menu. You can crop and straighten an image (this is similar a681f4349e
