A real iPhone with real iPhone features might have been released as early as October, although we're 99% sure of this. It's a big "maybe," but maybe is better than nothing. Maybe is better than a whole lot.

A shortlist of retailers and smartphone makers who are rumored to be working on a follow-up to the iPhone 8S, including Apple, LG, and Huawei, might give us a little more insight into what to expect when next year's new iPhone is announced. There are loads of fake iPhone 8S leaks and rumors, but the only thing we know for sure about what the iPhone 10 might be is this: It's possible.
