Measurement of total and regional left ventricular pressure in infants and children: the impact of end-systolic volume. Left ventricular pressure (LVP) is most commonly estimated using the index of contractility by end-systolic pressure-dimension relationship (ESPDR). This is now the "gold standard" for measuring LV function in adults but its use in infants and children is rarely questioned. The authors investigated the impact of changes in end-systolic volume (ESV) on the ESPDR and measured blood pressure (BP) and end-diastolic volume (EDV) using simultaneous left ventriculography and quantitative LV pressure-volume (PV) conductance measurements in 13 infants. Blood pressure and ESPDR were also measured in a second group of 10 infants following balloon-inflation of the ascending aorta. The blood pressure-EDV relationship was then estimated by conductance. The correlation between LVP and pressure was similar to that found in adults, although the slope of the ESPDR was not. The blood pressure-EDV relationship showed a much steeper slope in infants than in adults. Thus, the blood pressure-ESV relationship in infants was steeper than that in adults and similar to that in the balloon-inflation group. We conclude that the ESPDR is not as accurate in infants and children as in adults. The blood pressure-ESV relationship is much steeper in infants than in adults, whereas that in the balloon-inflation group was similar.

Mar 14, 2018 . . . The Wisconsin Supreme Court has rejected an appeal seeking to stop a federal judge's order to release more than 6,000 pages of documents about Scott Walker's time as Milwaukee County executive. The state's high court granted an appeal brought by the conservative group Wisconsin Institute for Law and Liberty but hasn't scheduled a date for oral arguments. Thursday's release of documents covers the period from 2002 to 2005 when Walker was executive. A different federal judge in March ordered that the release be continued until a judge can rule on whether the documents should be made public. The state filed an appeal challenging the judge's order to release documents that were classified by Walker's administration. The conservative group Wisconsin Institute for Law and Liberty had asked the state Supreme Court to stop the release, arguing that it jeopardizes public safety because officials were warned about a terrorism threat and could be infiltrated by foreign agents. On Saturday, January 7, the Middle East Strategic Alliance has been formed. This community founded by the Scientology religion will be allowed to join MESA. According to the MESA website, the purpose of the Alliance is to provide a neutral and peaceful alternative to conflicts and conflict between religious groups. By extending this concept to other non-religious groups, the MESA community will also provide such an alternative. As time goes on, Scientology's voice will be heard at the group's meetings on a variety of issues. Scientology MESA Today I spoke with Catherine Tinsley, an attorney who has been assigned to assist Scientology MESA. She explained to me what this community is all about. This is exciting. I have heard from many people that the MESA community is going to be a positive addition to everyone's lives. I hope that this new community will be able to reach many people with peace and understanding. Mesa was created by Hollywood actor Tom Cruise, who was an advocate for the Scientology religion. The church has suffered a bit of a setback in the last few months, with many former Scientologists taking the opportunity to talk out against the religion. Why would someone leave such a positive and uplifting religion if they weren't some sort of failure in life? This is a community of people who have been in the church for a long time, some even since Tom Cruise was first running in Scientology courses, at the age of 15. They are, in fact, devotees
