With a 2-1 win over the Boston Bruins on Wednesday in the Atlantic Division semifinals, the Ottawa Senators are in the driver's seat in the Sens Nation playoffs. We'll be doing a separate series of posts looking at the 2016-17 Senators, including thoughts on the first-round series against the Montreal Canadiens. Check back as we go.

SENATORS EDITION Ottawa Senators 2016-17 Season Preview

The Senators finished the 2016-17 season with 101 points in the standings. That was good enough to claim the sixth seed in the Eastern Conference. The Senators held on to their spot in the postseason because of a pair of one-goal games, not a regulation victory over the Toronto Maple Leafs. The Senators also had wins in three of four games in the final stretch of the season. The Senators had the third-best record in the NHL at home. They also started 12-0 in the NHL at Canadian Tire Centre and went 7-0-0 for the month of November. The Sens went 14-8-2 against teams that finished with a winning record. They were 6-7-0 against the rest of the league. When you consider they finished with the same amount of wins as the St. Louis Blues (in the Central Division) and the Florida Panthers (in the Southeast Division), Ottawa was the league's best team in the Central. Ottawa also ranked No. 1 in both Corsi and Fenwick percentage. The Sens' best defencemen, Erik Karlsson, was tops in the league in Goals Above Average while Michael Stone and Marc Methot were second and third in the NHL in the same category. Karlsson was also third in the league in Defensive Points Percentage. The Senators were also second
