Q: Speeding up matlab.. more efficient loop I'm trying to speed up a matlab code I'm working on right now. It does give the desired result, but it's horribly slow, and I have read through the documentation and forums, but haven't found an answer to my question. Basically, I have the task of writing a program that randomly generates a number of cards for a game. To speed up the program, I would like to have a loop that loops over, say, 500 cards, and for each card, it will see if the position(0-5) matches the inputted card(i) and if it does, create a new file with the name position(0-5)-card(i) (i.e. position0-card1, position1-card2, etc.) Can anyone point me in the right direction? Thanks in advance! A: this should be significantly faster and requires less resources than posting half of your code: n=500; for i=1:n file_name = ['position' num2str(i) '-' num2str(i) 'card' int2str(i)]; f = fopen(file_name); if(f == -1) continue; line = fread(f,1,'int8'); fclose(f); line = num2cell(line,2); pos = line{1}; card = line{2}; if(~strcmp(pos,card)) continue; continue; end f = fopen(strcat(dir_name,file_name),'a') for i=1:n fprintf(f,'%d %d ',position(i),card(i),i) end fclose(f); For the first time in a decade, the scandal-hit Italy could see a smooth transition of power. Q: Nuget package ignore with nuget 3.0 I have created a custom nuget package and installed it with nuget 3.0. I have added a package configuration file like this: xxxxxxx xxxxxxx xxxxxxx But the package is still available to update, and I can't see the 'force' switch on the 'Get Packages' page. Is there anything missing? I want to prevent my package from being updated by using force switch. A: There are two things you need to do to prevent the package from being updated by using force switch: Make sure the package version you are requesting is higher than the current package version in the NuGet server. For instance, if you package version is 1.0.0, you need to configure your nuget to install version 1.0.0 or higher. Always pass allowPrerelease=false when you call nuget install. This will make the package not available for updating. This blog explains how to configure nuget.exe or nuget.exe.config file: The following section about "Update a custom package" in the above article. You need to do the following things: Create a new package configuration file (nuspec). Add the required entries in the package configuration file. Update the Xml Documentation comment inside
