A deadly score-attack hack-slash dash run 'n' gun-athon, Skelly Selest pits you against a growing army of beasts, perdition God-dogs and Pit Fiends to fight your way through. The good news, you come to Hell, to be Hell. The bad news, you come to Hell, to die in a grid of 3x3 squares. Hell itself is deeply procedural, with the number, distribution and strength of monsters in each area and room being determined at runtime. Every 30-50 minutes, one of the Steam leaderboards update with real-time world-level leaderboard statistics, so jump to the top of the leaderboards and bet on who will reign supreme. After completing each of the main story missions, you must collect a host of precious items in order to unlock alternate character costumes, and gain access to further game modes. Apart from singleplayer, Skelly Selest also includes a co-op mode for 2-4 players, and a 4-player local split-screen Deathmatch mode. Features *

- * A large, procedurally-generated world, containing numerous new levels with secrets and items for you to discover

About the Artist

Kalen Chock is an Artist and Engineer. He has been creating games for 9 years now and is very excited about this project. After realizing that a lot of kids loves sketching and a few adults do not have any time to practice art actively, he started this new side business to fill this gap and to encourage people to paint. His side business idea started quite slow but soon managed to generate enough momentum to reach this milestone. To make the longevity of his new business grow, he is adding more and more new features to the game. He wants to appeal to the older generations especially those who practice art in their free time. To make sure he is able to make this game in different cultures, he added his ability to become a localization expert after completing this game.

Create a character for the game and watch the developers explain the choices and write their motives with the help of the Steem-engine: For more info about "Cold Verdict" check out the main website here: Thank you very much for watching and for your support! Cheers, AK Welcome to the community! You'll love it here! If you're serious and interested, we're always looking for more members. Most of us are friendly and want to meet new people from around the world. So feel free to join us here. Enjoy! It will be a competition which will have a random drawing for the winners. The winners will get a sim card with good speed and unlimited internet for 6 months (hopefully as the scenario will be an exciting one). For the rest of you, you'll have to come up with a scenario that will be the most unique and exciting among the 14 entries. The competition will be between the 14 users who post their entries on the dates mentioned below and we'll have a random draw for the winners. The game will be similar to sim fisher. There will be a mobile app, where the players can create their own characters, buy them items, play with their friends and challenge them, etc. Thanks to the developers of sim fisher for inspiration. I don't want to sound bossy, but if you have thought of creating a game, great. You can also join our game development discord () Please submit your entries till April 13th or till the word spread. The entries will be collected at Developers - You can play with students if you want to, but you have to give us a minimum donation of $100. The minimum donation will depend on the number of players per day (2 or 3) and the time zone in which the player is living (immediate access or automatic update). Admins - You can play with teachers if

: Genderqueer sex workers in Canada By Gail Lines April 27, 2014 Alice photographed in her work. PART I Why Place Women in Nice Boxes? Alice is in the midst of a revolutionary self-care regimen: She's exercising, she has a brand-new haircut, she's suddenly back in a relationship, and she's meticulously researching and documenting how LGBTQ people view and experience sex work in Canada. "Blam" describes the engine of a car, and does not begin to capture the coherence and intricacy of Alice's genderqueer selfhood. In her late teens, Alice first discovered her MTF identity in the piercing-and-tattooing parlor of the Vancouver stripper community. One evening while acquiring a 3-inch stiletto for her décolletage, she was asked if she knew what travesty it was to call a she-with-male-DNA a "trans man." "Aren't you a little bit trans?" she was asked for the third time in the six months of her cross-dressing and gender non-conforming habit. A fairy godmother appeared by the time she turned 26, the age at which Alice began to restrict or phase out cross-dressing and genre-mixing for her own safety and convenience. "But when I didn't, I met other transgender people," she recalled. "I started to understand the commonality of the way in which genderqueer and other non-gender binary identities are constructed by the dominant culture that we live in. It made me want to fight for the right to collectively exist in our own terms." Alice became quite radical, very quickly. Yet five years ago, when she read about the midcareer break Alice Baker had taken to do something totally radical in the field of trans linguistics and queer studies, she was further motivated. "Alice Baker shared with the world that her time out did not come without consequence," she said on the telephone from Ottawa. "I was driven to try to build on what she started. I'm trying to carry on her courage." Alice transitioned late in life, but life was already very difficult, indeed. "I used to have good sex most of the time
