"Atmospheric, melodramatic and never boring, this fantasy RPG made by the creators of Red Dragon is a great adventure." - CouchGames "In the visual and narrative department, Elden Ring Cracked 2022 Latest Version is gorgeous... Each realm that you visit features its own distinct scenery and character designs, and each world is embedded in a colorful and distinct world. Overall, Elden Ring looks gorgeous and is one of the prettiest indie games I've ever played. I love the atmosphere, the music, and the scenes that are full of lore and poetry." - UpperDeck "Elden Ring combines the visual style of a 16-bit JRPG with the storytelling style of a Hollywood epic. The game looks great and the stories its telling are highly impressive." - gSparks "Elden Ring is the most elegant and beautiful RPG I've ever played. Even though it contains a great story, a great music, and great animations, it looks like I was playing an interactive movie." - Bluerain "Elden Ring is an incredible RPG with lots of charm." - TheEscapist "If you like the kind of emotional and tragic story telling of the movies, then Elden Ring is a must-play." - Action0715 "Elden Ring is a beautifully crafted RPG that delivers a sprawling adventure that never gets boring. It's a true living world where you'll find yourself... You can play it by yourself, or connect with friends to enjoy a rich and rewarding narrative." - NG Gamer//

Twilight Princess: A New Legend of Zelda Posted by z-post on September 3, 2011 at 10:54:37 AM CDTQ: Asking "Blah blah blah..." to be given attention I was watching a TED talk/video this morning about setting up a workshop for the next generation of scientists. One of the points was asking students to ask the instructor for time to air out their thoughts/ideas and ask or answer questions. The speaker said one of the good ways to be given a lot of attention is to say the following: ...blah blah blah... At about the two-minute mark I start to think well, no-one gives their thoughts in the TED talks without asking first. How has this phrase fallen out of common use? What would an example be that doesn't have a reason to say so (because it is not something ever said, or someone just replies with "sure, blah blah blah")? A: Saying "Blah blah blah" is not something people often say, but there are lots of terms that don't have perfect analogs in common English, and some of those "colloquialisms" really do follow a fairly regular pattern. Specifically, "Blah blah blah" is a fairly universal way of getting someone's attention for a reason that isn't obvious. You have to be careful about using that one, because it can be seen as rude.

Missouri's armed robbery suspect was suicidal and sorry for his actions, authorities say JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. -- A south-side man accused of holding up a Missouri bank with a military grade explosive device was sorry for what he did and wanted to die, according to reports. Prosecutors say 27-year-old Zachary Hammonds robbed a Missouri bank in June and stopped at a gas station in Urbana before he robbed the federally insured Citizens Bank near Interstate 57 last Tuesday. The small claymore explosive device type police say Hammonds used in the robbery, and it was filled with rubber bullets and nails. Three other people were in the vehicle with him and in the bank and none of them were hurt. Jefferson City prosecutors say Hammonds posed as a law enforcement officer in the robbery. Prosecutor Maggie MacDonald said Hammonds showed the teller he had a gun. MacDonald said Hammonds gave the teller a demand note and let her know if she didn't give him what he wanted, he would kill her. The teller wrote down the account number and then opened the vault, all without Hammonds firing a shot. The three other people in the vehicle gave Hammonds cash after he robbed the bank. On Wednesday, Hammonds was taken to a hospital, possibly for mental health reasons. His name was also misspelled in an Urbana police booking report. The suspect will be booked on armed robbery charges. Be the first to know Get local news delivered to your inbox! Sign up!
