More than 40 years after the first FIFA game released, we are thrilled to introduce a new playing style that introduces a new type of player. The realism in this year's presentation is very high, with more game moments set to the latest innovations in research and development like "HyperMotion Technology." This is a game in which there's a lot to master and enjoy. We can't wait for you to get your hands on FIFA 22. Will we see players run away from tackles this year? You bet we will, as we understand that there's a lot of demand to re-introduce the zonal marking system of FIFA 2001/11. Expect to see more tackles with five-man full-backs this year, as we understand that many fans are requesting to change the laws of the game in order to prevent international goalkeepers or defenders from receiving free kicks. The system will allow the player to be returned to the correct position for five full seconds after they are marked by a team-mate. FIFA will allow the player to move forwards and backwards, and sideways in accordance with this law. Our hope is to bring fans closer to the game by adding more gameplay elements that were missing from past titles such as mini-games, fatigue and random decisions. As ever, we want to offer fans the opportunity to build and share their favourite players and tactics. We are also excited to announce that popular features including The Journey, the Career Mode and Ultimate Team Ultimate Draft will be returning to FIFA in a way you've never seen them before! We know that there's a lot more to discover in FIFA 22, and we're excited to see all of the new features you'll find when the game launches on August 27.1. Field of the Invention This invention relates generally to archery equipment and, more particularly, to a bow construction that allows for use with a mechanical stabilizer.

2. Description of the Related Art The art of archery has progressed considerably. The use of mechanical stabilizers has been around for some time, yet these devices are used primarily by expert archers. Oftentimes, the user is not in an ideal position to use a mechanical stabilizer. To be effective, the stabilizer must be in close proximity to the archer's hand. Mechanical stabilizers require a significant amount of space in order for the user to effectively shoot a bow. Also
