Full HD It's All Gonna Fall Down edit - Jay-Z ft Ne-Yo & Kanye West (solo) From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia It's All Gonna Fall Down Edit November 8, 2009 It's All Gonna Fall Down is a song by the American hip hop group The Black Eyed Peas, released as a free download on November 4, 2010 as the second single from their eleventh studio album, The E.P. The song charted on the Billboard Hot 100 at number 99, becoming their first song to miss the top 50 since "My Humps" in 2004. Background "It's All Gonna Fall Down" was written by group member will.i.am and producer Rodney "Darkchild" Jerkins. The song was in development for almost a year, and this was the first song the group worked on together since 2008's "The Time (Dirty Bit)". During this time, it was decided that the song's beat would be the strongest of the album's tracks, and when the group began working on the song, the group quickly agreed on how they wanted to record it, and this led to The Black Eyed Peas recording their vocals together while multiple microphones were placed in different parts of the studio. Throughout the recording process, will.i.am and Jerkins worked to achieve the final sound by mixing multiple tracks together to create one harmonious track. During his mid-2010 appointment to the Georgia House of Representatives, will.i.am would do a soundcheck at his district's precinct by "stomping" in front of the microphone as he sang "It's All Gonna Fall Down", according to Jerkins. "It's All Gonna Fall Down" debuted on the Billboard Hot 100 on November
