The title of the Psalm is "A Psalm of Praise," and the Psalmist is thanking God for the gift of a song. This includes the gifts of song and praise, and He sees in both a blessing. As an introduction, we pray these words from the 21st Psalm: "For the Word of the Lord is living and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the division of soul and spirit, and of joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart." All of us in the Church of the Holy Sepulcher are aware of how the Song of Songs was at least as important in the life of the early Church as the Gospels.

The Book of Psalms was in the heart of all those early believers, and their spiritual edification was based on the melodies of their hymns. In the Song of Songs, not only are we blessed with a musical feast of praise to God (Song 1:1-2), but there are songs of the heart that deal with issues that are central to the Church's mission of discipleship in our world. These songs convey profound truths about God and God's relationship with His people that are also central to our understanding of the nature of sin and redemption in God's plan for humanity. In Psalm 128, the Psalmist is recalling two particular songs he has sung as a gift to God. Verse 2 recounts the details of that first, "The words of my mouth and the meditation of my heart... were in the loving-kindness of the Lord my Rock." Verse 3 then tells us that he sings this song "at evening time," which may have been when the sun was about to set, and the Psalmist is in an intimate personal relationship with his God who is "my Rock." Generalized periacetabular osteolysis and progressive hip
