Good review. I like this game and the concept it is based on. But I had a bad experience with it. After pressing play you get introduced to some text and you are told that as the story goes on you will need to make decisions, if you want to survive. The decisions have to do with the pace of the game. Based on your decisions you will be presented with a decision to where you go, you have quite a few choices, and I would suggest you read through the decision thread as well as the decisions you made. I didn't read through the decision thread, nor did I make any decisions. I played through the first level and once I felt I was in control I left. I really didn't want to explore a new world and follow a new character. I have played a first person horror game where I played a character locked in a windowless room. I don't need to role play to experience an intense horror moment
