Awards & Accolades "Jam Studio VR brings a myriad of creative elements together. It can be played from a seated perspective on a table top, or with the VR elements enabled and no longer- a large part of the game. The scope of this VR project is the player immersing themselves into a musical experience, which combines two genres. This can only be described as a creative and innovative way to play music." Gamasutra.com "The mechanics of music creation are accessible on any level and will appeal to anyone that enjoys making music and has tried to learn an instrument." Runtastic.com "Jam Studio VR is a unique Virtual Reality game about making music. If you like music, you will really enjoy this game." TheHive "The game concept is really a novel and creative concept. If you are interested in VR music, you won't be disappointed. The details are done well. The game is good fun and enjoyable." InsideGameloft "This VR game is an excellent display of their VR expertise. And their musical composition is a little mixed with the voices. Overall, it is an excellent experience of VR composition and animation." Oculus/Space Lab Store "Jam Studio VR is a great follow-up from Virgin VR's earlier game, simply titled Jam Studio. In Jam Studio VR, you can use a variety of virtual instruments to compose your very own electronic music." SquadySquad "Jam Studio VR is a rhythm game with a twist, made with a VR headset in mind. By virtue of the physical motions of sitting down and plugging in a

Title Description Godly Temple Guide Introduction Introduction Concept and Themes Setting Cloning Cloning State of the Temple Map of the Godly Temple What you see here is the part of the Godly Temple that has been cloned twice. Whether this represents the fact that this location is second in importance to the main one in the temple or that this is just a copy we do not know yet. Everything is already in its place. Actually, everything is in its right place except for one important point. Unfortunately we cannot enter the temple from the main entrance. Something keeps blocking the door. This is also the case for the back door. There is only one way in and out for us now. That's how our puzzle starts. Go figure it out. Cloning Cloning Arriving at the Godly Temple City Setting Anxious Building for a Cloned Temple Introduction Basics of the Game Say Hello to Your Pawn Spinner Belief Spinner Location: Your Belief Landing a Belief When you land on the belief spinner the city is placed in the control of your pawn. He will guide you through the different beliefs on this website. We will leave that part to him for now and look at the different categories of beliefs. For now your Belief is named something like Yay Annesi. So far you've been able to land the belief and the city has not changed at all. The Beliefs The ten basic beliefs of all other religions are presented in their original setting. They have been cloned in this temple to demonstrate our point of view. The belief that humans have made gods of themselves is on the opposite end of the spectrum, closer to the Anantastevia and Judice temples. What we call true beliefs in our game are the same beliefs as the mainstream religions in this. Actually, the idea of a God would be the founding belief of almost all religions. This belief is the Godly religion's belief in the existence of God. Belief Spinner At your left hand you'll find your belief spinner. This will be your first tool to explore the different beliefs of the city. The belief you land on will be labeled according to what you land on. It will not matter which of the two beliefs you land on. At your left hand is your belief spinner. It does not matter which belief you land on. We have prepared three labels at the left hand of the belief spinner. To the right we have placed the beliefs of the main religions. That are the biggies. We made sure that there are similar in Canada In the wake of the murder of a 35-year-old man in Vancouver, British Columbia in July 2007, an investigation was launched to determine his killer's identity. The principal suspect was British Columbia Supreme Court Justice Simon Noël Rose, an established problem attorney practicing in Vancouver on the West Coast of Canada. In March 2008, Ray Johnson, a former RCMP corporal provided by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police to assist in the investigation, produced evidence implicating Justice Noël Rose in the murder. It was believed that Justice Rose had ordered a hit on his opponent in a civil suit. There was much circumstantial evidence supporting the claims of the police investigator, Ray Johnson and that some type of hit had indeed been arranged. However, police investigators still lacked definitive evidence of either correspondence from Justice Rose detailing an illegal act or evidence that the killer was even present in BC during the murder. Over the following year, with the mounting evidence of Ray Johnson's findings, the BC court of appeals prepared an impressive panel of justices who were committed to pursuing the justice system's proven, high level of due process procedures to make a determination of Justice Rose's guilt or innocence. Senior counsel were confident that despite the fact that the Anderson murder case was already over seven years old, the investigation of the case would result in a successful prosecution that would put this case on a high precedence level. Many considerations had lead to the conclusion of the BC Corrupt Practices Commission recommending charges for Justice Noël Rose. One of the most telling considerations was made by the BC Corrupt Practices Commission's internal committee investigating the Anderson case. This internal committee consisted of fellow CPP's, victims of various types of corrupt practices, partners who had been the subject of corrupt practices, and ex-CPP's who had been unfortunate enough to become victims of corrupt practices. The members of the committee concluded that this investigation had been the most thorough and intensive that had been conducted during the 25 years that they had existed. Over this time, the committee had amassed a vast repository of successful, similar legal cases, which they presented to the commission as indicative of the type of evidence that must be pursued in an investigation of this type. On 24 March 2008 the court of appeals convened to hear a 14-page statement made by a man who had been imprisoned for a drug and gun smuggling operation he ran with a Vancouver BC Provincial court Justice. He detailed his account of how he
