Q: Firebase user auth with custom authentication I'm trying to find out how to use different auth providers in Firebase. I have two apps, one app authenticates the user with Google and the second app authenticates the user with Facebook. Both of them work fine. I would like to use the Firebase accounts from these apps to go to my third app, which requires a username and password. I want it to authenticate with Facebook (username / password). So I guess I need to somehow wrap Firebase on top of Android's AccountManager and allow it to use two providers. What would be the best way to do that? A: You can't, at least not directly. Firebase authenticates with third parties via OAuth, which can only do a single authentication step at a time. There's no way to decouple that single authentication step. If you have two providers that can only do a single authentication, your options are: Use one provider, and fall back to the other provider after failure. This would be the typical "one app per user" strategy. Use one provider as the primary, and the other as the fallback, when it's needed. When the user logs in with one provider, I'd suggest just storing user information that you need in the case of a second authentication. Your third app just uses Firebase to check that information is present in the database and then uses that for authentication. You can see sample authentication strategies in the samples project in your SDK's GitHub repository. [Endoscopic management of post-tonsillectomy hemorrhage: a retrospective series of 107 cases]. Your shop email is already registered and you will now receive an email to confirm your subscription. You have already subscribed to this newsletter. About Bought and tested for nearly two years, this is the most lightweight (1.8Kg in the minim analogue edition) and powerful free running device known to man. This is a device designed with a new detrapping approach to gracefully change from human to Nordic running modes. NO more downturn or left turns in your footfalls! You will also think for an instant before you drop the ball. Controls use a piezo-electric accelerometer to prevent injury and give you a controlled yet fluid handover to Nordic running modes. The toe slider further enhances the transition from human to Nordic running modes. Please review the video section of the page as it shows you exactly how the controls effect the downhill aspect of the device. Slightly oversized to take a wide array of sizes but don't go smaller if you don't want the AS16 as it is quite unforgiving with extended /maximal use. Tested on H/T/H + T/H/H and H/H/H. With the AS16, start on flat ground and then run, climb, climb-drop... on any hill slopes, only flat ground thinking is required. When you are coming down, you will find the toe slider allows a smooth transition to flat running. This is a device that will take many years of hard use to wear out but we hope you enjoy it as much as we do from our use in our shops and in cold treatments for elite athletes. As President Obama and Republican presidential nominee Mitt Romney both continued to campaign in battleground states over the Labor Day weekend, the candidates have pointed fingers at each other to suggest a larger picture of economic uncertainty facing voters. GOP officials have repeatedly pointed at an “uncertain job market” as a central theme of the campaign, while Democrats have highlighted Mr. Romney’s previous claim that President Obama’s economic policies have “failed.” Each side offered a slightly different message. The country’s unemployment rate fell to 7.8% in August, the Labor Department reported Thursday, the lowest since April. That helped explain why the Dow Jones Industrial Average closed at its highest level of the year and amid positive economic data, showing the country’s third consecutive robust month of economic gains — with stock prices at multi-year highs. Mr. Obama reaped the benefits of that job market report when he visited a farm in Oswego, Ill., on Labor Day. The president noted the steady job gains and growth in a number of industries, including manufacturing, construction, and the public sector. “You’ve seen it in our businesses. You’ve seen it in the number of businesses starting up,” he said. “You’ve even seen it with the process of job growth that we’ve created in the public sector, more teachers and firefighters, police officers, more construction workers, nurses and
