html as well. I have done this using this code: header("Content-type: text/html"); header("Content-Transfer-Encoding: 8bit"); echo "Survey Results"; echo "Your survey results:"; echo ""; echo $row['survey_question']; echo ""; echo ""; echo "$row[survey_answer] "; echo ""; echo ""; echo ""; echo ""; The problem is, the email is only displaying the text, i.e, the headers are being ignored. Is there any way of getting around this? A: All you have to do is add the headers to the body as well: $message = Survey Results

Portable CursorUS is an application that allows you to control and customize the cursor as you wish. Send a user-friendly message to your clients - all in a few mouse clicks! Do you wish to send message to your clients to inform them about an event, a promotion, or even just to wish them a happy holiday? Do you prefer simple direct text messages to more elaborated email messages? Do you like the idea of a tool to create customer mailers like those used by digital printing companies? If you answered yes to at least one of the above, you should take a look at the application that we're discussing today - CIRCLEJOINT. The best thing about CircleJoint is its ability to send the best possible message depending on the type of event or offer. You can choose, among other things, the type of text to include in the message, such as a direct message or a form with the offer or an invoice. The application is also capable of working with recipients either by email or directly through its backend server. If your customers use the same email system as you, they'll receive their message in one shot. On the other hand, if they use a different email server, the message will be sent multiple times to each of them. CircleJoint Pricing: The basic version of CircleJoint can be purchased for just $49, and it includes: Send the message according to different conditions (emails or direct messages) Capability to create a mailer in the background to send out to clients (email templates) Priority and multiple sent messages (optional) Average work speed: 10 messages per hour, a maximum of 200 The application comes with 3 other versions, all of which increase the maximum possible number of sent messages, depending on how much data you choose to use for your message (see individual prices). The drawback is that the messages, including the images and text, are stored in one of the following folders depending on the version that you purchase: The application is user friendly and easy to use, and it comes with a small installation of just 2.8 MB, which you can easily download to your USB flash drive. It also supports the latest Windows 7 and Windows 8 operating systems. CircleJoint: Send the message according to different conditions (emails or direct messages) Capability to create a mailer in the background to send

Please follow me. Thanks. 12 comments Bought and installed it. This is the first Windows app that I am aware of that lets you extend the border width. The desktop and system tray icons are a little hard to find. Thanks, NCH. Enjoy your work. May I ask how many people will be using this program at once. I found the tray icon to be a bit small and hard to access. I would like to be able to put the cursor off screen to make it easier to use…even when only a small subset of my desktop area is available. I agree with the last comment. That is the main reason why I bought the program. Dorian June 9, 2012 at 20:17 This is exactly what I was looking for. When I noticed this, I had the thought 'If I could only put it on the left side of my screen, I'd be set'. (Note: I made all the cool-n-neat adjustments already, using the borders as a screen shield.) Thank you! I can't log in to the site to post my comment due to the site being unavailable now. It's over an hour since I published this post, but I don't know if it will work. Just in case, my comment is here: I also use Honeyspot, but there is one thing that I can't live without, – a feature to make my computer go up and off the edge of the desk. I have a Dell 2402T iiyama monitor, and this makes a lot of difference. There is no use trying to drag the mouse outside of the border! Thank you both for the feedback! I'm glad that my work has provided value to so many people. Dorian
