Date added: January 2020.Harmony UNIT Share: More Filters When we first saw the Harmony UNIT, it was a sleek, minimalist watch that was launching at an incredible $15,000 price point. There were a few things we thought the $15,000 price tag was going to be a hindrance for what is a terrific watch. Thankfully, we were pleasantly surprised when we got our hands on the Harmony UNIT. While it is on the high end of the spectrum of the Muhaiya collection, it is still a good value and the price points on the Muhaiya are highly competitive with the competition. There are an abundance of details on the UNIT. The Muhaiya is known for their attention to detail, and I must say that those details are even more impressive with the UNIT. The side of the watch is made of dark brushed titanium with a dark green color on the hanger. The hands have an opaque green dial and the display is made of opal white dial with a dark navy blue inner dial. The bronze accents give the UNIT a nice finish and they don't come across as a cheap piece. The complication is hidden under the crystal of the watch. There are three rotating sections that appear to be made of a soft metal. Once you get the watch off of the band, you can view the rotating sections and the Muhaiya logo that spins as you turn the watch. There is a soft touch ceramic bezel that is harder to feel than the Muhaiya logo. I was surprised at how easily the UNIT is worn with the movement exposed. The case and the bracelet are incredibly solid and the 14K gold lugs add value and protection to the UNIT. The lugs are very well-crafted and the case is well-fitted to the wrist. The UNIT comes with all of the M
