Targeted for Bulgarian Star Midfielder La Liga's Barcelona have been targeted by Bulgarian side Levski Sofia for star midfielder Blagoy Georgiev. According to reports in Spanish media outlets, in the opening week of the summer transfer window, the Argentineowned club have made a €4.5million bid for a 24-year-old who has 30 caps for his country. The Gabon international is under contract for another season and Barca are believed to be keen to retain Georgiev, with Athletic Bilbao making a move for the player last summer. Georgiev started playing in Bulgaria's second division and joined Levski in 2014, having spent a few seasons at Welsh side Aberystwyth University. Levski are in the middle of a title-winning campaign, having won the Bulgarian Premier League in the 2016/17 season. The Elephants are without a major trophy in their history and they currently sit in second spot.

Q: Python Interface not working I am using the Python interface to ReQL, and a query I want to run returns this: PluginError: Exception: code=13, message=Unsupported version format for Python API Is there any way to fix this? A: Sounds like a bug in the ReQL client code.

Please file a bug report at and a reference to that bug would help us to track it. If you want to work around this, you can use the console instead, or use the official ReQL client, which has Python support. Q:

Russia, which has tried to block Facebook and Twitter in the past as it tightens its own media laws, is the most aggressive. A: It's actually a coding convention that means a lot of "10"s. 10 is the ASCII code for a space. 10 is a string of 10 spaces. As for your actual problem, you can try changing the 10 to 8.

Some places of the Internet do, some don't. It's worth pointing out that there are plenty of stories of people getting into trouble with excessive backspaces. You should really only be putting 6 of them into each row, if you really need to have them in there. A: The problem seems to be that you're running into a particular issue with all the letters you put in your strings being intermingled with the ones from the backspace. While it's certainly an odd problem, the most likely cause is that you're typing in characters that are beyond what the "10s" will represent. Let's take a look at this example, then explain what the problem is: You're typing in 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 0, N, O, P. You'll notice that your entered characters all correspond to "1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10", except for 0 and N. That's because N (the number 0) is 0, not 10, and 10 is 1, not N. So for 0 and N, the 10s they produce represent "0, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9" and "N, O, P", respectively. By contrast, for 9, 10, and O, the 10s they produce represent "9, 10, O". The solution would be to swap out N and O for some other number other than 10 to produce "0, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, N, O, P", which will be essentially identical to what's shown here.
