The MSBuild Extension Pack can be found here I've created a new project and added the MSBuild Extension Pack and checked out the razor page templates. public class HomeController : Controller { public IActionResult Index() { return View(); } } When I try to build the project I get the error Could not load file or assembly 'RazorPages.Templates.dll' or one of its dependencies. The system cannot find the file specified. in vstest.console. The error is shown in the vstest.console window. This is the section of my vsts-ci.

How do I make my page have a picture to show off in a standard resolution of 1024x768 but the text in between the large picture will be larger, both in character and in overall area? So if I want my CSS to make the text larger and the image smaller, it would look something like. How do I make sure I have my max line count for text correct? So all in all I am wanting to accomplish something like this, but only in one direction because I do not want my page to look so messy that it is hard to read. I have tried many different ways that I have come across in this forum and other places on the internet and none of them have done what I wanted to do. Do you think you can help? Below is one of the ways I have tried to do it. I will copy and paste some of it so you can see. This is a very large paragraph of text that is going to have a picture in the centre of the paragraph. So I am going to make the text take up about 1/4 of the total width of the paragraph Text(size should be controlled by max-width) Text (size should be controlled by max d0c515b9f4
