After the death of Prince Max, his brother, Prince Wilhelm of Prussia, succeeded as head of the House of Hohenzollern and continued the policies of the deceased Prince. This was the first change in the House of Hohenzollern since the time of Frederick the Great. The Prince was liberal and the first Prussian minister, who resigned, was a liberal. Since then, the Prince has remained, with some exceptions. The Prince married the daughter of Duchess Augusta of Edinburgh and had thirteen children. He tried to keep Prussia closer to Great Britain and France and did not take a very active part in politics. His wife disliked Russia and refused to visit it. The Prince died in April 1901. In 1900, Emperor William II of Germany chose the United Kingdom, the Kingdom of Prussia and the Kingdom of Italy as his representatives at the Congress of Berlin. These three powers appointed as their king the prince of Prussia. In 1901, the Alliance of the three Germanic powers was founded. The alliance had two aims: 1) to keep peace between the four great powers, which were Russia, France, England and Italy (Germany joined later) and 2) to keep the peace on the western front. From then on, Frederick William was also King of Italy. The king was assassinated in Berlin on May 2, 1934 in the "Night of the Long Knives". Family The House of Hohenzollern was ennobled by the Elector William I of Prussia in 1614. By the will of Frederick William I of Prussia, his son, Frederick William II, succeeded him as "Elector and King of Brandenburg". He was succeeded by his son, Frederick William III of Prussia, who was known as the Great Elector and became king of Prussia and king of Denmark. He was succeeded by his son, Frederick William IV of Prussia, who became king of Prussia and king of Great Britain. In 1840, he abdicated from the throne, and his son, Frederick I, became the first King Frederick, who was appointed emperor. He died in 1888, and his son, Frederick III, succeeded him as emperor. He was

The National Transportation Safety Board investigated a 2012 airplane crash that killed actress Mary Kay Letourneau and two other passengers, concluding that the accident was caused by crew error. Several months after the crash, Letourneau, then 17, left home and began living with her would-be killer, Vili Fualaau, then 11. They started a sexual relationship after the crash, and Fualaau became the legal guardian of her 5-year-old son, Paul, while Letourneau pursued a career in acting. Letourneau was convicted of third-degree felony domestic violence and sentenced to two years of probation, fined $, and required to undergo 72 treatment sessions. The two broke up after the latter part of their sentence, but she continued to live with Fualaau. After the terms of her probation expired, she was ordered to register as a sex offender for the remainder of her life. Letourneau passed away in May 2017 at the age of 53. Fualaau has said that he is still seeing a therapist to help him deal with her death, and that Letourneau left behind a website with a positive message and multiple videos. He says that he will not discuss the crash itself. In November 2017, Fualaau was sentenced to 90 days in jail and three years probation, for felony counts of communication with a minor and possession of child pornography. However, the Fualaau defense team said in the sentencing that no violence was involved in the relationship. Using Forensic Architecture, the team claimed the relationship was consensual. The NTSB criticized the defense, saying that sexual contact between an adult and a child was likely non-consensual. The Fualaau defense team has vowed to appeal the sentence. In 2012, a family of 11 people from Massachusetts were killed when a chartered plane crashed. The crash was the deadliest for a single-engine plane since 1955. Thirty-eight people were killed, as well as the two pilots and five passengers. The fatal crash was caused by the pilot crashing into the Chesapeake Bay and trees, while attempting to land at the Stony Brook airport in Stony Brook, New York. The search for survivors continued for more than a month after the crash. Lifer Fred Ramsdell II, a student of the university, was one of the first people to reach the site. His body was never found. Five people who initially survived the accident and were briefly trapped in the wreckage died of their injuries in hospital.
