The thing is, it doesn't seem to want to return any of the data being entered. Here is my code: $my_data = array('uid' => 2, 'name' => "example", 'email' => "email@example.com"); $wpdb->insert('users', $my_data, array('%s' => $my_data)); and here is the error: Fatal error: Uncaught exception 'MySQLiException' with message 'Fatal error: Uncaught Exception: Access Denied in /home/nicholecohr/nicholecohr.co.uk/db_functions.php on line 6 EDIT This error is only for my current account, any other account I've created (and added in to the database) works fine. A: Your username and email is not saved in the users table. For this reason, the insert query fails. Therefore, when you insert data in the users table, make sure it will be valid and that you have given the correct permissions to add it. Also, I think you should look at the reference link to understand how to insert or update data in the database: Utah Gov. Gary Herbert has decided not to call a special legislative session to address the crisis in the state's foster care system. After several days of negotiations between the governor's office, legislative leaders and child welfare advocates, Herbert said Thursday his administration had reached an agreement to address the budget crisis. Seth Fero, the director of government relations for the Department of Human Services, said the governor's press release was not intended to mean the special session has been canceled. However, Fero said,
