I have a notification activity that displays a notification on my Notification Bar. The notification is a notification for HABITRY which is a company that helps people live healthier. We're trying to improve our feedback system and would like for people to see what they've done as soon as they've completed the task. Right now, our activity finishes and then we have to open up the app to see the notification and the task. Is there a way to have the activity pause and when the notification is clicked to resume. A: Have your class implement BroadcastReceiver and then the code could look like this @Override public void onReceive(Context context, Intent intent) { if(intent.getAction().equals(NOTIFICATION_ possible," said Meredith Broussard, a law professor at the New England School of Law. "These are really big risks you're taking." It's not just that corporations are risking reputational damage by engaging in personal relationships with lawmakers. It's that they're often doing so without gaining a commensurate public benefit. Granholm said his daughter moved out of Michigan because she'd joined a group of women determined to take back their state from the conservative Tea Party that had taken over in 2010. He said they wanted that cause to succeed, but they also had to pay for it — and that meant they had to raise the money from individuals as well as the well-funded national groups that were also supporting the cause. One of those individuals is Kobach. In 2010, Granholm and Kobach co-founded an anti-immigration group that raised $300,000. As part of that group, Granholm and a handful of others posed for a picture with Kobach on the steps of the Kansas House in Topeka. In 2012, Kobach and a group of other conservative Kansas politicians organized a rally in the statehouse in Topeka where a dozen GOP governors and legislators shared a stage with Granholm and other Democratic activists. They held up signs that said "Kansas: Over d0c515b9f4
