The process of programming a game is already challenging enough, but in the case of game production, a good project can turn a profit and encourage a talented team to make more games. Many studios do find themselves in a situation where they can't afford to program their own game. There are many times in history where people look to the public domain for content but still want a hand in developing the game. Thus the rationale behind game creation is to create something that is worth looking at. This is not something that is difficult to understand. If you know how to write code, or any form of computer programming, you could open a game studio and produce games. Such studios that have the time to develop their own games still have a few things to consider before starting up a studio. What Is Your Game About? Most of the games we would like to see are the games that are a blast to play, and are usually high quality
