In other words, the Programme is perfect. That is how Antonopoulos put it in an interview with the Athens newspaper, Ethnos. It is clear the Cypriot Government will not adhere to the terms of its debt restructuring (3.5 billion euros, 32.4 percent of GDP), and that it will not stay in the Euro-area beyond 2018, which means at least more austerity. In these circumstances the Programme is unrealistic, but the Cypriot economy will have to accept the Programme. The Budget Minister, Christodoulos Bottas, will prepare a supplementary budget for 2018, the third in less than a year, and that is to cut public expenditure and pensions, and increase taxes. At the moment, the economic statistics will be the worst since 1950, because the Greek economy will not advance, or even function, in the coming years. The Centre for Economic and Policy Research (CEPR) has published a research bulletin on The Greek Economy on the eve of the debt restructuring, that will happen on 15 August. Two years ago the same research bulletin found that GDP was -0.3 percent. Two years ago, the Syriza government had not implemented its programme: devaluation and re-entry into the euro area, and so the economy began to recover. Last year, the CEPR study of the Greek economy estimated that its GDP would be
