A single-center comparison of polyglycolic acid suture to polyglactin 910 for intra-abdominal wall closure. The primary objective of the study was to compare the advantages and limitations of polyglycolic acid (PGA) with polyglactin 910 (Vicryl) for fascial closure of surgical wounds in a low-risk abdominal surgery setting. The secondary objective was to assess the rate of wound infection in such patients. Surgical procedures were performed on 273 patients from January 2011 to May 2012 in a UK hospital. Group A received Vicryl sutures and group B PGA. Demographic data, length of surgery, length of operation to take out the specimen, hospitalization, overall rate of surgical site infection, and wound dehiscence were collected. All statistical analysis was performed using Microsoft Excel. A total of 273 patients were enrolled in the study with 139 and 134 in the Vicryl and PGA groups, respectively. Age and body mass index were similar in both groups. The median length of surgery was shorter in group A (median 180.5 min) compared to group B (median 216 min) (p 6/29/2012 It's been an interesting week at work. I thought I was

I have the same issue. My numpad is busted because I changed the handlebars, however the board looked okay to me. So I picked up the numpad from a 99 The little numpad has a flat plastic plate that connects to the plastic numpad plate of the IH board. If you remove that then the numpad and clicker can be removed. I think you should also clean it to make sure there is no debris between the individual surface plates. If that's the issue then you could take your problem and ask the same or similar question on the other support board. I am a new member to this forum and don't have a lot of reputation so can't post to make a new thread. However, I need help with a problem I have. I have a tool from DeWalt, RCC-40. I replaced my blade with an extension handle so I could drill the nut heads (used some trick from another forum). When I try to tighten the nut head screws, I only get the screws on one side of the handle. The other side is not tightend so it comes off when I pull the screw and the nut. My only thought is that the screw that slips is not big enough for the hole. I have tried a drill, sand paper, and put to much thread locker in the screw hole. I am sure I have put enough to it. I have not taken the handle off yet to see if the head has moved or something else could be wrong. I have a tool from DeWalt, RCC-40.
