1. Field of the Invention The present invention is directed to an apparatus for automatically putting together and piecing together fabric covers of the type used to line beds.

2. Description of the Prior Art Apparatus have been known for use in automatic quilting machines wherein a fabric piece is mounted in a frame or housing which includes a needle bar and stitch forming elements which form sewn stitches. The fabric piece is then moved through a stitching and cutting mechanism to trim the edges of the fabric piece to complete the work piece. An example of such a type of fabric piece is a quilting pad which includes a body portion having a width and length and at least one pair of opposite sides of the body portion. Such a fabric piece can be made by cutting out a piece of material, usually foam or a non-woven layer, and then stitching along the sides to complete the pad. The body of the fabric piece generally is round or rectangular and of a sufficient length to be wrapped around an upright bedpost. A not so uncommon variation of this type of fabric piece is in the shape of an oval, or oblong with opposite ends rounded or narrowed to facilitate an oval. The fabric piece shown by way of example in FIG. 1 of the drawings, is a quilting pad 10. This pad 10 is a relatively short pad which can fit snugly around a bedpost. The pad 10 has a pair of parallel sides 12, 14 and a base 16 which is narrow enough to be gripped by the user's hand. The pad 10 may include a rigid base 16 which would normally be of a substantial thickness, sometimes being over a half an inch thick. The thickness is necessary to
