| CCS3.1 AND FILL AND OPTIMIZE FILES (Photoshop CS3) The Gradient tool is something you use all the time when editing, either choosing a color or creating a range of colors for different areas of an image. In Photoshop, you can automatically fill a selection with a gradient color using the Gradient tool, a feature called "Gradient Fill." You can also quickly apply special effects or filters to portions of your image. And you can even use the Fill and Optimize Files feature to automatically convert a local file to the latest version of Photoshop before opening it. By saving the version of Photoshop you want to open to your computer's desktop or My Documents, you can quickly open any file stored on your computer in Photoshop and have it update with the latest features and enhancements of the program. --- | --- IMAGE RESIZE For many designers, creating a corporate logo from scratch is a daunting task because there are so many variables involved in creating a professional logo. Designer Julie Ann Delgado, a creative director for Xerox, created a company logo from scratch. She started by drawing a few simple marks and then used the existing logo from Xerox and the original font to complete the design. The logo design process for personal websites is fairly quick if you know how to use the proper tools. First, find a good website design company in your area. That company should have an established track record of winning contests. It will be able to help you come up with a template and tips. Also, you need to search for a template that has a similar layout to your site, so you have some ideas to start with. Your next step is to create a grid on the site layout so you have some blocks and a general sense of layout. Don't worry about colors, font styles, and everything. Just create a good grid first and put your site together afterward. If you don't want to take the time to design your own personal website, another option is to hire someone. Check with a design company, which usually has a large bank of templates to choose from. For example, wedding websites can be one of the most time-consuming tasks for a small business owner to have to create on their own. Luckily, there are a lot of online resources for wedding planners that list attractive templates for a small business to choose from. Make sure to check the legality of someone designing the site for you, as you wouldn't want to
