I would like to simply merge the files within each folder into a single file. For example, I have folder A, B, and C. They are all versions of the same software, but I only want the version which is the most recent. How do I merge them together into a single file without having to use third party software? I'd like to do this in batch, because I'll be renaming a bunch of these files later on. I am using Windows 7. A: Once you have a file list of all the files in your source directories, then you can use the xcopy command: xcopy source files\path destination\path /s/y/q You can use wildcards if needed. Or look at robocopy. Q: Trouble using promises in AngularJS I'm trying to use promises and $q.all in AngularJS. All code runs fine, but when I try to use the.then() function I get an error. This is the code I'm using.

Here's the problem: When debugging my MVC4 application, when I reach the point where I create a new database and try to log into my website for the first time, I get the following error message: Could not find a part of the path '..\Users\Me\AppData\Local\Temp\wfe917o.temp.mdf'. As you can see, there is no user account named "Me" in my home directory. My files are located in the following directory: C:\Users\Me\Projects\MyProjectName\AppData\Local\Temp And there is no subdirectory called temp. How do I fix this? A: It is recommended to host your application on the root of C:, not inside your home directory. That gives you access to everything you need (both application data and user data) through the "AppData" folder in your home directory.
