It was hypothesized that the time for normal male alpacas to achieve a urea:creatinine ratio of 0.1 in their first voided morning urine would be 15 d. Urine collections were made from male alpacas maintained on a diet containing adequate urea. Urea:creatinine ratios were calculated and samples taken for analysis of urine urea concentration and urea:creatinine ratio on days 1, 5, 10, and 15 of the period of urea depletion. The concentration of urea in the urine of alpacas increased at the rate of 28 mmol/L/d between days 1 and 5 of the depletion period. Daily urinary urea:creatinine ratios varied from 0.06 +/- 0.02 (mean +/- SD) on day 1 to 0.06 +/- 0.02 on day 5. Between days 10 and 15, the urinary urea:creatinine ratio was asymptotic (0.11 +/- 0.04). The data presented support the hypothesis that the depletion period in male alpacas is approximately 5 d.Nude lesbian sex Orgasms are triggered by the clitoris being stroked and also by sucking on clitoris.
