A feature-rich image editing tool We'll look at Photoshop's features one by one starting with the user interface. The basic features are the name and the pen tools. To use the pen tool, navigate to Edit ► Pen Tool, and click the Pen icon. For more information on this tool, visit the Help system (or press F1). Drag the mouse over different areas of the image until a box appears around the area you want to select. You can then drag the box in any direction, and you can select multiple objects at a time if you hold the Ctrl (Windows) or Shift (Mac) key and click multiple times. You can then move, copy, and delete objects by clicking and dragging them to a new location. You can select an image and place text, a drop shadow, a text box, or a freeform selection object on an image to edit it. You can also adjust the position of the object by using the mouse or by pressing Ctrl (Windows) or Shift (Mac) to select a control point and move a line or arrow on the image. You can also adjust the size of the image if necessary. Adjusting an image can be done with layer masks. Layer masks are transparent areas that make an image appear to be one object even though it is actually multiple objects. Select the layer you want to change, and then navigate to Edit ► Adjust ► Create Masks. For more information on layer masks, see "Preparing an Image for Use in a Catalog" in Chapter 2. When you use layer masks, the changes take place in the layer that you made the mask in; so, when you make a change in the mask, the layer's new properties affect only that one layer. However, you can use the linked thumbnail to view all the layers associated with that layer. You can use the view of all layers in the right-hand panel. When you select a particular layer, it opens in the left-hand panel. The layer panel allows you to hide and show different layers, organize your layers, and change the properties of a layer. You also can change the opacity of a layer with the Opacity sliders in the layer panel. The layer panel's buttons allow you to create and remove layers, reduce or enlarge layers, change the opacity, and use one or more layers as a guide. When you change the opacity of a layer, you see its content on the image

Q: The underlying connection was closed: Could not establish trust relationship for the SSL/TLS secure channel I get this error when trying to open an url and I've set the SSL settings to Full Trust but I'm still getting the error. The code is the same on both the server and client and as such it doesn't work: ... `HttpRequest request = (HttpRequest)WebRequest.Create(url); request.Credentials = CredentialCache.DefaultCredentials; request.KeepAlive = false; request.Method = "GET"; request.Accept = "application/json"; request.Headers.Set(HttpRequestHeader.ContentType, "application/json; charset=utf-8"); HttpResponseMessage response = (HttpResponse)request.GetResponse(); JObject json = JObject.Parse(await response.Content.ReadAsStringAsync()); ... Unable to read data from the transport connection: An existing connection was forcibly closed by the remote host. - at System.Net.Sockets.NetworkStream.Read(Byte[] buffer, Int32 offset, Int32 size) - at System.Net.HttpWebRequest.GetResponse() Also I noticed a couple of times this is a duplicate of this question but the solution was to close a running process and this has never worked for me. A: Couldn't find any answer and it didn't work for me as a client trying to connect to a server who I assume to be using the same certificate so it worked fine for me only to fail later as I tried to connect from the same server but the new certificate it's for different domain. The solution was to register the domain on the trusted root certificate store: static void Main(string[] args) { X509Store store = new X509Store(StoreName.RootCertificateAuthority, StoreLocation.LocalMachine); store.Open(OpenFlags.ReadOnly); X509Certificate2Collection sc = store.Certificates.Find(X509FindType.FindBySubjectDistinguishedName,`

Between 31 December 2008 and 31 December 2009, Oyo state had an average of 207 patients confirmed malaria per week for treatment as out-patients with uncomplicated malaria. The total number of malaria treatment in the private health sector was estimated to be over 1.4 million. The private sector was the dominant source of malaria treatment both in terms of number and total expenditure. Among the private sector, government and NGOs accounted for the majority of malaria treatment with patients accounting for about 80% of the treatment. The average expenditure on malaria treatment in the private sector was USD 13.65. About 10% of the patients opted to seek malaria treatment from traditional healer and herbalist. About 26% of the patients opted to use self - medications. A total of 66% of the patients admitted to resorting to self-medication. The per capita expenditure on self - medication was USD 1.4. Among the patients that resorted to self - medication, the type of drugs used included antimalarials (44.4%), antimalarials + SP (25.9%), antimalarials + ACT (21.1%) and SP only (7.6%). The remaining 9.2% of the patients opted for herbal drugs. Expenditure on self - medication was below USD 0.8 per capita. Parasite Ranges in Oyo State About one fifth of the slides examined contained Plasmodium falciparum alone. Seven slides contained both P. falciparum and P. vivax. These slides represent a potential risk of relapsing malaria and treatment failure. Treatment failure or non-compliance with malaria treatment because of the high parasite density may partly account for this. The possibility of malaria parasites being present in areas outside the state is also not to be ruled out. Further study on this is recommended. The possibility of introduction of drug resistant parasites in Oyo state from other parts of the country is also a possibility. Conclusion Malaria has been a public health problem in Oyo state for many years. Among the key stakeholders, the private sector is estimated to be the dominant source of malaria treatment in the state. The study revealed that almost 70% of the patients in the private sector sought malaria treatment for the first time. The choice of place of malaria treatment largely depended on economic considerations. The average expenditure on malaria treatment in the private sector was USD 13.65. The study also revealed a number of
