Doomtrooper: The Arena is a futuristic Arena card game with a rather retro feel. Inspired by the 80's CCG as well as the 90's nostalgic card games like Dominion, Chaos in the Old World, Goa'uld: Ancients of Days and Data Decks. The card game features 7 distinct factions that each have their own playstyle and characteristic cards. The Player begins the game with a deck of 25 randomly drawn cards from a player owned deck box containing a record of all the cards from all the factions ever used in any Gameplay. The player will also be equipped with 100 Destiny Points (DP) that are the "currency" used to play cards. The player will also receive a Player Pack to hold another 25 randomly drawn cards. From there the player will be able to take any direction they see fit. Winning matches, defeating enemies to earn Victory Points, and completing Daily Missions will earn you additional Destiny Points that you can use in the game. The Destiny Point reward system provides the core gameplay as well as the leveling aspects of the game. Each victory earns you a card back. The more Victory Points you earn, the higher the level of that card back. Each Victory Point is also a card drawn from the Destiny Point pack, usually featuring a completely random faction card. After defeating 10 Warriors you can acquire a new card back corresponding to what you defeated, as well as acquire a Victory Point card from the Destiny Pack.}, The Trichotomy of Dark Matter from Gravitational Wave Observations of Binary Mergers. Microsoft is developing artificial intelligence for its cloud services. Executives at the company recently revealed that it is working with the National Institutes of Health on building AI systems in its Azure cloud service. On stage at Microsoft’s Build developers conference this week, the company said the combined efforts will develop AI that can assist with the “diagnosis, detection, and therapies in the realm of medicine.” For example, “AI can help detect the early symptoms of Parkinson’s disease before patients develop permanent symptoms and help our doctors and health care providers decide what type of treatment to provide,” said Raja Manick, general manager of Microsoft’s AI and enterprise group, at the event. It’s the first time the tech giant has disclosed its involvement in the area of AI in the cloud. The company’s efforts will focus on using advances in deep neural networks, which involve
