The receiver should be as close as possible to the computer screen (to keep cables short) and the keyboard should be as close as possible to the computer. As long as the keyboard sits on top of the receiver everything should work fine. Step 4: Attaching the Touch Panel Again place the receiver where you want the touch panel to be and attach the touch panel to it. The receiver has two small holes, the touch panel has one hole on the side which is used to connect the touch panel and receiver. This connection should be made with a strong and strong adhesive (you can use double sided tape) and with an extra dot of adhesive for the touch panel to sit flat. Once everything is connected you can put the touch panel in place. Make sure you close the small tab and the screen is in the correct position! Step 5: Connecting the Computer Set your computer to output to HDMI (usually this is done by pressing the "picture" button on your computer or by pressing the HDMI icon on your TV). Input HDMI on your TV/monitor and the
