Blast builds up pressure, is finally blown up and devastated The Attribute-based stats can be found in the Attribute-based stats section to the right. The availability of Blasting Rounds is determined by a debuff system called the Blasting Round Debuff, where you gain a debuff as you deal damage to your target. This debuff increases over time and will decrease only when you deal no damage to a target. You gain a Blasting Round Debuff when you deal a minimum of 150 damage, and the debuff will disappear when you deal at least 200 damage to the target. Blasting Rounds consumes several Blasting Charges, which are similar to life and mana. When you have no Blasting Charges and you are in combat, you can replenish them from a Luminary. If you do not have the Blasting Round Debuff, you will not do damage. Blast status. When you're in Blast mode, your attacks will increase in damage and your health will become afflicted with the "Blast" status. For every 100 damage that you deal, your Blast status will increase by 10% (going up to a maximum of 100% Blast). Your Blast
