Bathroom. Music career The demo tape that Jones sent to Rick Rubin's American Recordings in 1990 included a cover of Sister Sledge's "He's the Greatest Dancer". The label was intrigued by the demo and Jones was contacted with an offer to sign him to a recording contract. The first album released by the band, titled Dead to Me, was released in 1991 and the album was a critical and commercial success. In the same year, the band began opening for the alternative rock band R.E.M. The band toured for two years and after the tour's end, drummer Dave Lepard left the group to pursue a career as a jazz artist. Jones was approached by R.E.M. about drumming for them, and upon beginning to drum for them, he felt that it was "instinctual". Despite wanting to be a drummer, Jones found it to be enjoyable as he did not have to focus on time. In 1993, he released the first single from the album, "Fucked Up Friendship", from Dead to Me's second album Behind the Mask. The song was a success, despite only being a single, and the band found themselves earning a lot of attention due to the song's popularity. Their third album Born Too Late saw the band starting to explore their sound more. Jones credited vocalist Chris Carrabba for bringing a new sound to the band. Dead to Me
